- Student participation was encouraged but not necessarily solicited in a way that created dialogue or discussion for the majority of the class. This was improved with the introduction of more group discussions.

- I expected from the course to have discussions about major events in the international history. The course was one of the best that I had but what I really missed was the discussion part, it is not the fault of the teacher as he tried to have discussions but the students did not want to talk and discuss.

Comment from the faculty

This was a good class in terms of student engament and they worked hard. There remains a perennial problem of how to engage students and encourage them to discuss the issues covered in the course, so various techniques were used. Group discussions were also conducted, but these take an inordinate amount of time and the course is already packed in terms of contents to cover. I will consider reducing further the number of topics, but it is an introductory course and so it necessarily has to cover a wide range of topics. I will try to come up with additional ways to get students discuss the topics (in addition to group work and presentations).
